DOWN SYNDROME DISGRACE

Immigration limbo forces GTA family back to Costa Rica

Gilbert Ngabo
Metro | Toronto

A GTA family whose immigration was snarled by their son's Down syndrome has left the country — tired of waiting after the federal government failed to meet the promised timeline for a decision.

"They had promised news for me by the end of June but now are saying I will have to wait until fall," Felipe Montoya told Metro in an email from Costa Rica.

Montoya moved his family to Canada when he accepted a job as an environmental studies professor at York University. But, when they applied for permanent residency in 2013, the Montoyas were told their son could be an undue burden to the country's health system.

Nico Montoya FACEBOOK

The family appealed and has been waiting for a decision since late last year. They moved out of their Richmond Hill home two weeks ago.

"They felt so much stress and frustration," said Hadayt Nazami, a lawyer acting on the family's behalf. "Waiting is hard especially when you have children. People have to make plans for their lives."

Montoya is dedicated to fighting the government's decision and fighting for his 13-year-old son, Nico. Citizenship and Immigration Canada's stance is "discrimination based on disability," he told Metro.

A group of volunteers in Toronto are pushing for policy changes that would help people like the Montoyas.

Canadian immigration laws, for example, prevent excluding refugees or people sponsored by a family member on the grounds of health issues. The same does not apply, however, for temporary foreign workers, like Montoya.

"That's discriminating against people we're bringing here," said Laura Dottori, one of a dozen people helping to secure Montoya's permanent residency.

"Anyone who is invited to this country to work should be allowed to stay," said Dottori, who also has a son with Down syndrome. "If I were an immigrant, I wouldn't be able to stay."

The Charter of Rights forbids the government from denying someone based solely on disability, she said. "It's incredibly wrong and unfair, and it sends a harmful message … that disability is a negative thing."

DESIGN

Addition made of shipping container underway

May Warren
Metro | Toronto

Construction for Carl Cassell's shipping container addition behind Harlem Underground is fully underway. LIZ BEDDALL/METRO

Growing up in Jamaica, Harlem Underground owner Carl Cassell was used to people using old shipping containers for homes and shops.

So, when he wanted to add an addition to his apartment behind the Queen West restaurant it seemed a natural fit.

"They're self-contained they're structurally solid, they're just amazing," Cassell said.

Three six-metre tall shipping containers will be "married" with a conventional design, which Cassell is billing as downtown Toronto's first permanent shipping container home

"In many ways, it's actually worked out to be more expensive, but I love what it represents, the idea. I'm saving the planet in some way because there are so many of these things lying around," he said of the project.

Cassell plans to invite graffiti artists who have worked in a nearby graffiti alley to decorate the containers and will christen the final creation, 'graffiti house.'

He already has building permits from the city and just needs to get one final parking exemption before he can start construction.

The company that's going to install them, Storstac, is working on a similar permanent home in Hamilton and recently built a shipping container market in Moss Park.

David Pali of Storstac said the appeal of shipping containers isn't saving money. Cassell's addition, for example, will cost about the same as a conventional one.

Durability and sustainability are really the big draws, Pali said.

"They're designed to last 20 years on the ocean," he said of the containers, which he likens to "Lego pieces" for their stackability.

GREEN TREND

Shipping containers have been finding new life as housing developments in Vancouver for some time now.

Atira Women's Resource Society, which opened in 2013, has 12-units of container housing.

This spring, Vancouver City Council approved another shipping container development with 21 units of affordable housing.

PEOPLE

Questions over 'bride' abound

Who is the masked bride?

Spotted around Toronto in a wedding gown and white mask, the anonymous woman pens troubled notes about a "prince turned into a monster."

The letters, dated and addressed "To Whom It May Concern," seem to revolve around her former partner and "the drugs, the alcohol, the women" he allegedly abused.

"I fear for the other women you will meet in your life … It gives me nightmares," reads one letter dated July 16 and apparently written in a downtown coffee shop.

The emotional notes — whether earnest or performance art, or both — speak to the complex nature of abusive relationships, with the author admitting she is "still in love" with her ex-lover.

The man supposedly runs several restaurants. "He pursued almost every woman in his three restaurants for eight years and I never knew."

The letters allege worse, accusing the man, whose identity is unclear, of sexual assault.

Yonge St. should not favour cars: Designer

Gilbert Ngabo
Metro | Toronto

Downtown Yonge Street could soon be redesigned to favour pedestrians and cyclists over cars.

An environmental assessment launched Thursday is the next step in designing a new Yonge Street between Queen and Davenport.

Coun. Kristyn Wong-Tam, whose office is leading the project in partnership with Downtown Yonge BIA and Ryerson University, said the study will look specifically at wider sidewalks, planting more trees, more public art, adding street furniture and building cycling infrastructure.

The initiative is a longtime coming, said Ken Greenberg, a Toronto urban designer.

> We've got to get people out of cars and get them using transit, biking and walking.
> Ken Greenberg

"Yonge Street has an extraordinary volume of pedestrians that's growing all the time," he said, noting the city has been studying how to widen sidewalks since before amalgamation.

In 2012, when the city shut down sections of Yonge Street and opened them exclusively to pedestrians, there was little impact to traffic and a big jump in business, said Greenberg. Studies have shown that the downtown stretch of Yonge has twice as many pedestrians as drivers, he added. "Yet sidewalks are very narrow," he said. "We've got to get people out of cars and get them using transit, biking and walking."

The environmental assessment will examine options like taking out two lanes of traffic in exchange for cycling tracks or sidewalks and closing entire sections of the street to cars either temporarily or permanently.

Toronto is lagging behind other major cities when it comes to creating pedestrian zones, Greenberg said, citing Barcelona, Paris, London and Copenhagen as examples.

"This is part of a positive shift that's coming to the city," he said. "You can't just rely on cars anymore."

TORONTO'S DEADLY STREETS

Expanded plan to allow city to 'very aggressive' on issues: Coun.

Luke Simcoe
Metro | Toronto

Toronto took a step towards fixing its deadly streets Thursday as council gave unanimous approval to an expanded version of the city's first-ever road safety plan.

The five-year, $80-million plan includes a number of engineering, enforcement and education measures geared towards reducing, and hopefully eliminating, fatalities and serious injuries on our roads.

One cyclist and 22 pedestrians have died on Toronto streets this year, putting the city on track to meet or exceed last year's tally of 43.

The plan would lower speed limits on a number of roads, including most major roads in the downtown core. It would also establish pedestrian and senior safety zones where intersections, signal timings and signage will be altered with safety in mind.

Debate on the council floor largely focused on the scale of the plan, as councillors contrasted the "data-driven" interventions recommended by transportation manager Stephen Buckley with more ambitious and sweeping changes occurring in other jurisdictions.

For example, Toronto's plan lowers speeds on roads where serious collisions have already happened, while New York's Vision Zero plan saw default speeds reduced citywide.

A number of councillors asked for — and were granted — further speed limits in their respective wards.

The budget for the original plan was $68 million — $40 million of which was new spending — but a subsequent staff report recommended increasing funding to expand the plan.

"From the beginning, this plan had great bones, but the scale and scope were not enough," said Coun. Jaye Robinson, chair of the public works committee.

Robinson said the new money will allow the city to be "very aggressive" in tackling road safety.

The expanded plan did not satisfy all councillors, including Kristyn Wong-Tam who moved a motion to have the five-year timeline ramped up to two years. The motion failed, but a similar motion by Coun. Mary-Margaret McMahon asking staff to assess the cost of accelerating the plan, passed.

+ AMENDMENT

If Coun. Frances Nunziata gets her way, it could soon become illegal to text and walk in Toronto.

During the debate over Toronto's new road safety plan, the Ward 11 councillor moved a motion requesting city council to ask the province to amend the Highway Traffic Act in order to make it illegal for pedestrians to use their phones while crossing the street.

"If you're texting and driving, or texting and walking ... it's the same," Nunziata said.

The motion passed 26-15, prompting laughter and boos from the council floor. "It's a very serious motion," Nunziata shot back.

RACE AND GENDER

Forum to fill support gap for those who feel on their own

Gilbert Ngabo
Metro | Toronto

Adwoa Afful grew up seeing little support for young black gender-non-conforming girls.

"I'd go to conferences, and there would be great ideas about African Americans, racial issues, but nothing dedicated to young black queer and trans girls," said the recent York University graduate. "You were kind of on your own in terms of figuring life out, and there wasn't much support."

She's out to change that.

Afful is the spark behind Black Futures Now Toronto — a public forum designed to provide black queer, non-binary and trans girls with a safe space to talk and share experiences.

Inspired by American groups such as Black Girls Are Magic and Black Girls Are From the Future, Afful said her effort "is about addressing a gap that has existed for far too long and needs to be broken."

The first event is Saturday at York University and will discuss issues of representation and social justice. Speakers will lead conversations about community advocacy, queerness, art, policy and diversity in general.

Organizers hope to grow the group into a networking platform for young girls, with a goal of helping them become more independent and make informed decisions about their lives.

"There are definitely a lot of opportunities out there for everyone, but not many of these young black girls know about them," said Afful. "We hope our platform becomes their go-to place."

CANADA'S WONDERLAND

Gay Day called off for safe-space fears

Gay Day has been cancelled.

LGBTQ advocacy group PFLAG announced Thursday it had nixed the eight-year-old annual event at Canada's Wonderland after a park employee told a gay couple to stop hugging in line last month "because this is a family park."

A statement on the group's Facebook page accused the amusement park's management of being unwilling to "commit" to more robust sensitivity training for staff.

Bev Belanger, president of PFLAG Canada, said she couldn't in clear conscience agree to continue Gay Day without such assurances.

"I felt that if this could happen, then the training wasn't adequate or trickling down to staff," she said.

"We can't offer a safe space, so how can we continue?"

Park spokesperson Soulla Lindo did not respond to requests for comment. Earlier in the week, Lindo called the no-hug request an "isolated incident" and said discrimination is not tolerated at Wonderland. She said all 4,000 employees receive "human-rights training." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

AUGMENTED REALITY

Pokémon Go fans urged not to play while on the move

Police forces across Canada are warning of the risks involved in playing augmented reality games such as Pokémon Go as reports mount of people getting injured or landing in trouble as they play the wildly popular game.

The cellphone-based game sends players into the real world to search for digital monsters known as Pokémon, who appear on screen when users hold up their iPhones or Android devices in various locations at various times.

While not officially released in Canada yet, many residents have found workarounds to access the game that's become a blockbuster hit since launching in the United States, Australia and New Zealand last week.

April O'Neil, Ariana Nussdorf, and Julia Voth play Pokémon Go at Pershing Square in Los Angeles, Calif. Police are urging players to be safe while immersed in the game. AFP/GETTY IMAGES

Police forces, however, are worried about the game luring people into potentially dangerous situations and are cautioning players to use their common sense.

In Quebec City, police said two officers suffered minor injuries when a car they observed driving strangely reversed into their cruiser in a parking lot.

"The driver said 'I'm sorry, I was playing Pokémon Go,"' said Const. Nancy Roussel, who said police are calling on players to be aware of their surroundings.

"Be careful, watch out, even if you are in a car, on your feet or on a bicycle, be careful and watch where you're going, please."

Every time the Pokémon Go app is opened, a warning from game maker Niantic pops up, telling players to be aware of their surroundings. Players must also agree to fine print saying they cannot enter private property without permission.

But despite the warnings, some people playing the game have wandered into private yards, driveways, cemeteries and, in one U.S. case, even an off-limits police parking lot in search of the app's cartoon monsters.

Some police forces have also been employing the hashtag #DontCatchAndDrive as players roam community streets.

"Please do not look for #Pokémon while driving. If you've gotta catch 'em all, do so safely. #DontCatchAndDrive," tweeted Edmonton police.

South of the border, police in the U.S. have cautioned players that trespassers could get arrested or worse, especially if they cross paths with an armed property owner. THE CANADIAN PRESS

In rows of four, police officers in fluorescent vests combed through ankle-high grass and chest high fields of canola in a small town northeast of Calgary in a search for evidence in the disappearance of Taliyah Marsman.

Insp. Don Coleman said police expanded their search to the rural area after receiving information indicating a man they took into custody in the case late Wednesday night, had been spotted there briefly in the preceding days.

"We have information the individual we have in custody was in that area for a brief period of time so we're looking for anything that might be related," he said.

Coleman said police had only found one item of interest, but aren't sure if it is related yet.

"The only thing I know that was found was a stuffed animal of sorts, but we have no idea if that related to this or not," he said. "It's a large area and there are probably several things out there that we may or may not know where they've come from."

The people of the town of Delacour said they were hopeful five-year-old Taliyah, who has been the subject of an Amber Alert for 48 hours, would be found.

Margaret Orr took a search of her own property, underneath trees and in the tall grass after seeing HAWCS overhead.

"I've got little grandchildren — five, eight and 10 — so my heart just goes out to that little girl feeling all alone, or probably cold. I don't know... I just wish we could find her safe."

May gets down to Brexit business

Theresa May wanted Britain to stay in the European Union, but the government she unveiled Thursday leaves little doubt that Britain's new prime minister intends to fulfil voters' instructions and take it out of the 28-nation bloc.

Americans fear their presidential options

The vast majority of Americans say they are afraid of at least one of the two major candidates — Hillary Clinton or Donald Trump — winning the White House, a remarkable finding that reflects an unsettled nation unhappy with its choice.

Eighty-one per cent of Americans say they would feel afraid following the election of one of the two polarizing politicians, according to a new Associated Press-GfK poll. That includes a quarter who say it doesn't matter who wins: they're scared of both.

Three-quarters of voters say their pick for president is motivated by a desire to cast their Election Day ballot against Clinton or Trump, more than those who say they're voting for the candidate who shares their positions on the issues or is the most qualified to hold the office.

Said Dennis Fernandez, 67, of Florence, Ariz.: "If Hillary Clinton won, I'd probably consider suicide. I'm definitely not a fan."

And Lawrence James, 55, of Durham, N.C., said: "If Trump wins, well, we've already checked out Malta and New Zealand. I'm just not comfortable that he's not going to make rushed, uninformed decisions."

On the eve of the summer's political conventions, at which the general election campaign officially begins, the latest AP-GfK findings underscore the deep sense of unease that is sharpening the political divide in America and shaping an already nasty race for president. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

'A scene of horror'

NICE, FRANCE

Truck ploughs through Bastille Day revellers, killing dozens

A truck loaded with weapons and hand grenades drove onto a sidewalk for more than a mile, plowing through Bastille Day revellers who'd gathered to watch fireworks in the French resort city of Nice late Thursday. At least 80 people were killed and 50 wounded before police killed the driver, authorities said.

Nice prosecutor Jean-Michel Pretre described a horrific scene, with bodies strewn about along the roadway and Sylvie Toffin, a press officer with the local prefecture, said the truck ran over people on a "long trip" down the sidewalk near Nice's Palais de la Mediterranee, a building that fronts the beach.

Wassim Bouhlel, a Nice native who spoke to the AP nearby, said that he saw a truck drive into the crowd. "There was carnage on the road," he said. "Bodies everywhere."

Nice regional president Eric Ciotti said on France Info radio that "it's a scene of horror" and gave a figure of 60 dead. The reported figure later rose to 75.

The Paris prosecutor's office opened an investigation for "murder, attempted murder in an organized group linked to a terrorist enterprise."

The president of the Provence Alpes Cote d'Azur regional council, which includes Nice, said the truck was loaded with arms and grenades. Christian Estrosi told BFM TV that "the driver fired on the crowd, according to the police who killed him."

Bouhlel said he witnessed the man emerge with a gun and start shooting.

Images being broadcast across French media showed revellers running for their lives down Nice's palm tree-lined Promenade des Anglais. In what appeared to be evidence of a gun battle, photos showed a truck with at least half a dozen bullet holes punched through its windshield.

> "I saw bodies flying like bowling pins.... Heard noises, cries that I will never forget."
> Damien Allemand

It was not immediately clear who would have been behind an attack, but France has recently seen a spate of dramatic assaults from by jihadist groups, including the Daesh group that straddles Iraq and Syria.

Writing online, Nice Matin journalist Damien Allemand, who was at the waterside, said the fireworks display had finished and the crowd had got up to leave when they heard a noise and cries.

"A fraction of a second later, an enormous white truck came along at a crazy speed, turning the wheel to mow down the maximum number of people," he said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Outrage, sympathy pours in Canadian politicians are joining the outpouring of outrage and sympathy after a truck plowed into a crowd of people in Nice, France.

Prime Minister Justin Trudeau has tweeted that Canadians are shocked by the attack."Our sympathy is with the victims, and our solidarity with the French people," Trudeau said.

B.C. Premier Christy Clark tweeted that the incident is just horrible. "Thinking of all those involved and their families," she tweeted. THE CANADIAN PRESS

THE POWER PLANT OF THE FUTURE

Swiss scientists at the Laboratory of Nanoscale Biology have designed the teeny-tiniest power plant ever. They published their experiment this week in the journal Nature. They harnessed osmosis — the natural movement of molecules from high concentration to low concentration across a membrane — to generate electricity.

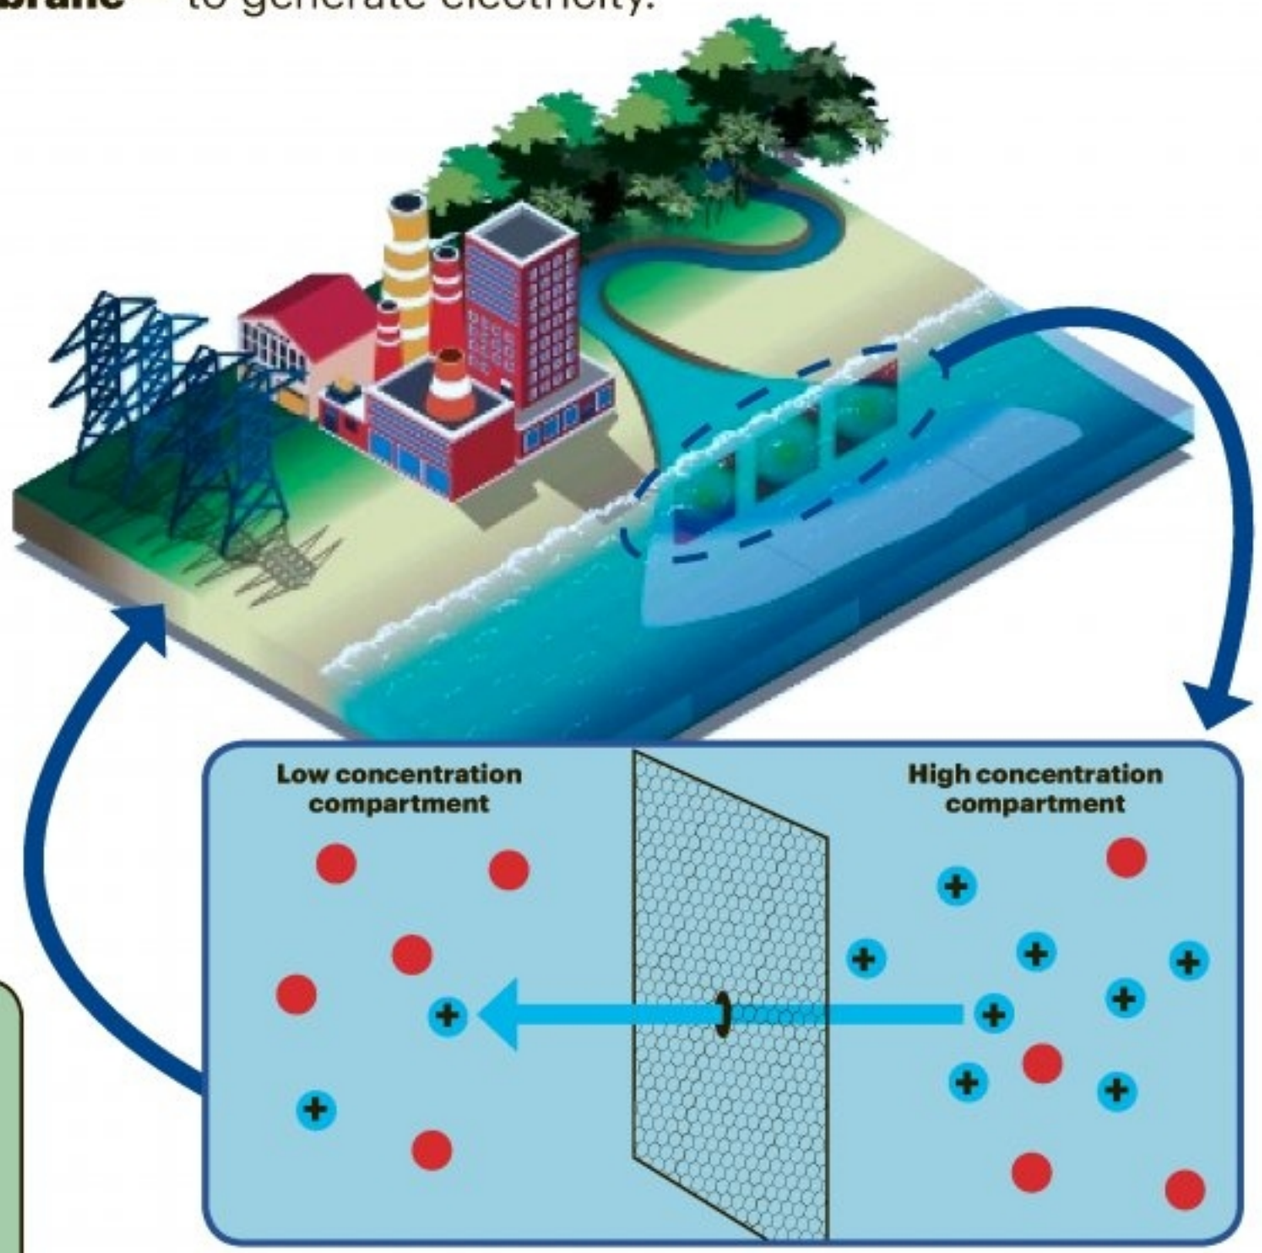
HOW IT WORKS

The scientists built a tiny device with two fluid-filled compartments, one with a high concentration of a dissolved salt and the other with a low concentration. The fluids are separated by a membrane just three atoms thick made of a compound called molybdenum disulfide.

1. The membrane has a tiny hole called a nanopore, just big enough for the salt ions to pass through. The pore is negatively charged.

2. The positive salt ions pass through the pore, moving from the high-concentration compartment to the low one. The pore repels negative ions.

3. So, negative charges build up on one side of the device and positive charges on the other. That movement of charges is electricity! Researchers said the resulting electric power was enough to run a tiny transistor.



THE POTENTIAL

In real life, fresh water comes in contact with salt water every day in estuaries, where rivers meet oceans. If giant membranes could be installed at the juncture, capturing the osmotic power of salt moving from high concentration to low concentration, the result could be a reliable source of renewable energy. Unlike the wind (doesn't always blow) or the sun (doesn't always shine) the ocean is always there.

Is hate part of human nature?

Everyone is a little bit racist. It's scientifically proven, right? — D.B., Winnipeg

Yes, the evidence suggests most people, at least unconsciously, have a not-so-nice view of marginalized groups like African-Americans and gay people. Social scientists call this implicit bias, and there's significant controversy over how it's measured.

A popular way to measure bias, including racism, is an implicit association test (IAT). It's a computer game that works something like this: You sort images (of black or white people) and words (like "great" or "horrible") into two categories, "Black/Unpleasant" and "White/Pleasant." Then the categories switch to "Black/Pleasant" and "White/Unpleasant."

If you're faster at sorting when black is paired with unpleasant, the program gauges it's more automatic for you to think that way. Therefore, you have a higher degree of implicit bias against black people. In a popular IAT available online from Harvard, 70 per cent of participants are biased against black people.

Though it's been used for decades, many experts question if the IAT is valid (if it really measures what it's supposed to) and reliable (if its results are consistent).

I tried a little reliability test of my own. I did the Harvard IAT online. It found I have "moderate" preference for white people over black. Two hours later, I tried again, throwing in a confounding factor: blasting an upbeat song. Only "slightly" racist this time.

I'm skeptical of IAT, and not because it called me racist (I live in this racist culture of ours after all). I have a hunch that it's used not because it's the best metric, but because it's straightforward and cheap. Naturally, it's a gross oversimplification of racism: a messy, centuries-old phenomenon.

For studying complicated stuff, nothing beats long-term qualitative research like in-depth interviews and anthropological studies. It's expensive, but it's irreplaceable.

The mystery of a great muse

IN FOCUS

Paul Feig, Melissa McCarthy make magic in movies

Richard Crouse
For Metro Canada

Melissa McCarthy, foreground, has found big movie success with director Paul Feig. Her next outing is Ghostbusters in which she shares the screen with talks with Kate McKinnon, Kristen Wiig and Leslie Jones. CONTRIBUTED

Consider the muse.

Alfred Hitchcock made three of his greatest films with Grace Kelly and tried to lure her back to the big screen long after she retired. Martin Scorsese and Leonardo DiCaprio have a seemingly unbreakable cinematic bond and the world of movies would be far less interesting if Werner Herzog and Klaus Kinski had never met. John Ford and John Wayne inspired one another to do their best work and Tim Burton and Johnny Depp's shared eccentricities gave us unforgettable nights at the multiplex.

Muses inspire their directors to aspire to new heights, to push the limits of their creativity.

Add another to the list: Melissa McCarthy.

Over the course of four films — including this weekend's Ghostbusters — she has upped director Paul Feig's game and in turn he gave her the roles that broke her out of the TV sidekick treadmill and turned her into a big screen star. "It's not even like we go, 'We've got to do the next movie together,'" Feig says.

"It's just that suddenly the next movie will pop up and I'm like, 'You know who would be great for this?' So it's funny that people think we have an agenda to keep doing this."

Agenda or not, their creative chemistry is undeniable.

Feig describes McCarthy's audition for the first film they made together, Bridesmaids, as a "religious moment." She was less sure.

"The whole ride home from the audition," she says, "I was thinking, 'I got too weird. Should I turn the car around and do that cheesy actor thing of I can do it better! Give me another shot!'"

The director cast her in the scene-stealing role of Megan — imagine a feral, female Guy Fieri — and it was her flashpoint.

Her wonderfully weird performance, complete with sexual hijinks and an explosive bout of diarrhea — "It's coming out of me like lava!" — stole the show out from under other, better-known stars like Kristen Wiig — and earned her an Oscar nomination.

Next up for the dynamic duo was The Heat, an odd couple, buddy cop movie set in Boston co-starring Sandra Bullock.

McCarthy plays a tough-talking street cop who forms an unlikely alliance with the uptight Sandra Bullock to bring down a murderous drug dealer.

The role riffed on McCarthy's signature character, the aggressive but damaged comedic persona. "I've played a lot of characters who are very vocal, very aggressive," she told me in 2014.

"For the women I've played there is a reason why they are so ballsy and it is nice when you see the crack in the veneer and you realize, 'It's part of their insecurity. They stay loud so nobody yells at them.'"

Feig knows when to let McCarthy off the leash — there are some wild slapstick scenes here — but he also knows when to pull her back and let the script do the work.

This week McCarthy headlines Feig's all-female Ghostbusters reboot alongside Bridesmaids co-star Kristen Wiig.

Will that be their final collaboration? Don't count on it.

Feig is reportedly writing a Spy sequel as we speak.

"She's so good," he says, "and we just really have the same sense of humour."

Scientists say they can relate to roles in Ghostbusters

Kris Abel
For Metro Canada

Ghostbusters is the first adventure led by women from the field of science and technology. I asked astrophysicist Rachel Ward-Maxwell from the Ontario Science Centre and creative technologist Alex Leitch, co-founder of Site 3 coLaboratory, to attend a screening. They loved it.

Leitch: I loved the original Ghostbusters. It was great. As an adult? It's not the movie that it was when I was a kid. This movie is the movie I really wanted it to be. It means a lot to see yourself represented onscreen. The way that everybody related to each other really reminds me strongly of my circle of friends from the MakerSpace scene.

Ward-Maxwell: Having films where you see women in science, in particular in this film a team of women scientists, and it's emphasized quite often in the film that they are scientists and they believe in the scientific method. It's like watching a super hero movie, like The Avengers, but it is a woman, who is a scientist, who is rescuing another woman, who is also a scientist. It's just so...mind-boggling, I hope it becomes the norm.

Leitch: I tried to buy the glasses that Kate McKinnon wears throughout the movie last summer, because I weld things and they are delightful. I really associate strongly with the characters who run towards danger and run towards trouble and machines. In my previous career I have definitely built crazy-light beam weapons that are incredibly dangerous (laughs).

Ward-Maxwell: I could really relate to Kristen's character. At the beginning, she's working towards her tenure at Columbia University, she's a theoretical physicist, she's practicing her lecture in an empty classroom, trying to present herself in a way that is authoritative to her students. I do have some experience working with super computers, which are cool, and also some pretty powerful telescopes.

Leitch: I really believe that this movie, at the very least, will give us a brand new crop of amazing Makers who are women and friendly to women, both of which really matter a lot. I am optimistic it will get us an amazing generation of engineers.

Ward-Maxwell: I definitely think we're going to see lots of young girls dressing up like Ghostbusters, which is about time. I think it's going to be awesome, I think it can be very aspirational, not just for young girls, everybody, to see not just a great cast of women, but a great cast, not just a great group of female characters, but a great group of characters be on a wonderful adventure. They talk about how they're physicists. For me, as a physicist, that's something very rare. I think that might allow young girls to take an interest.

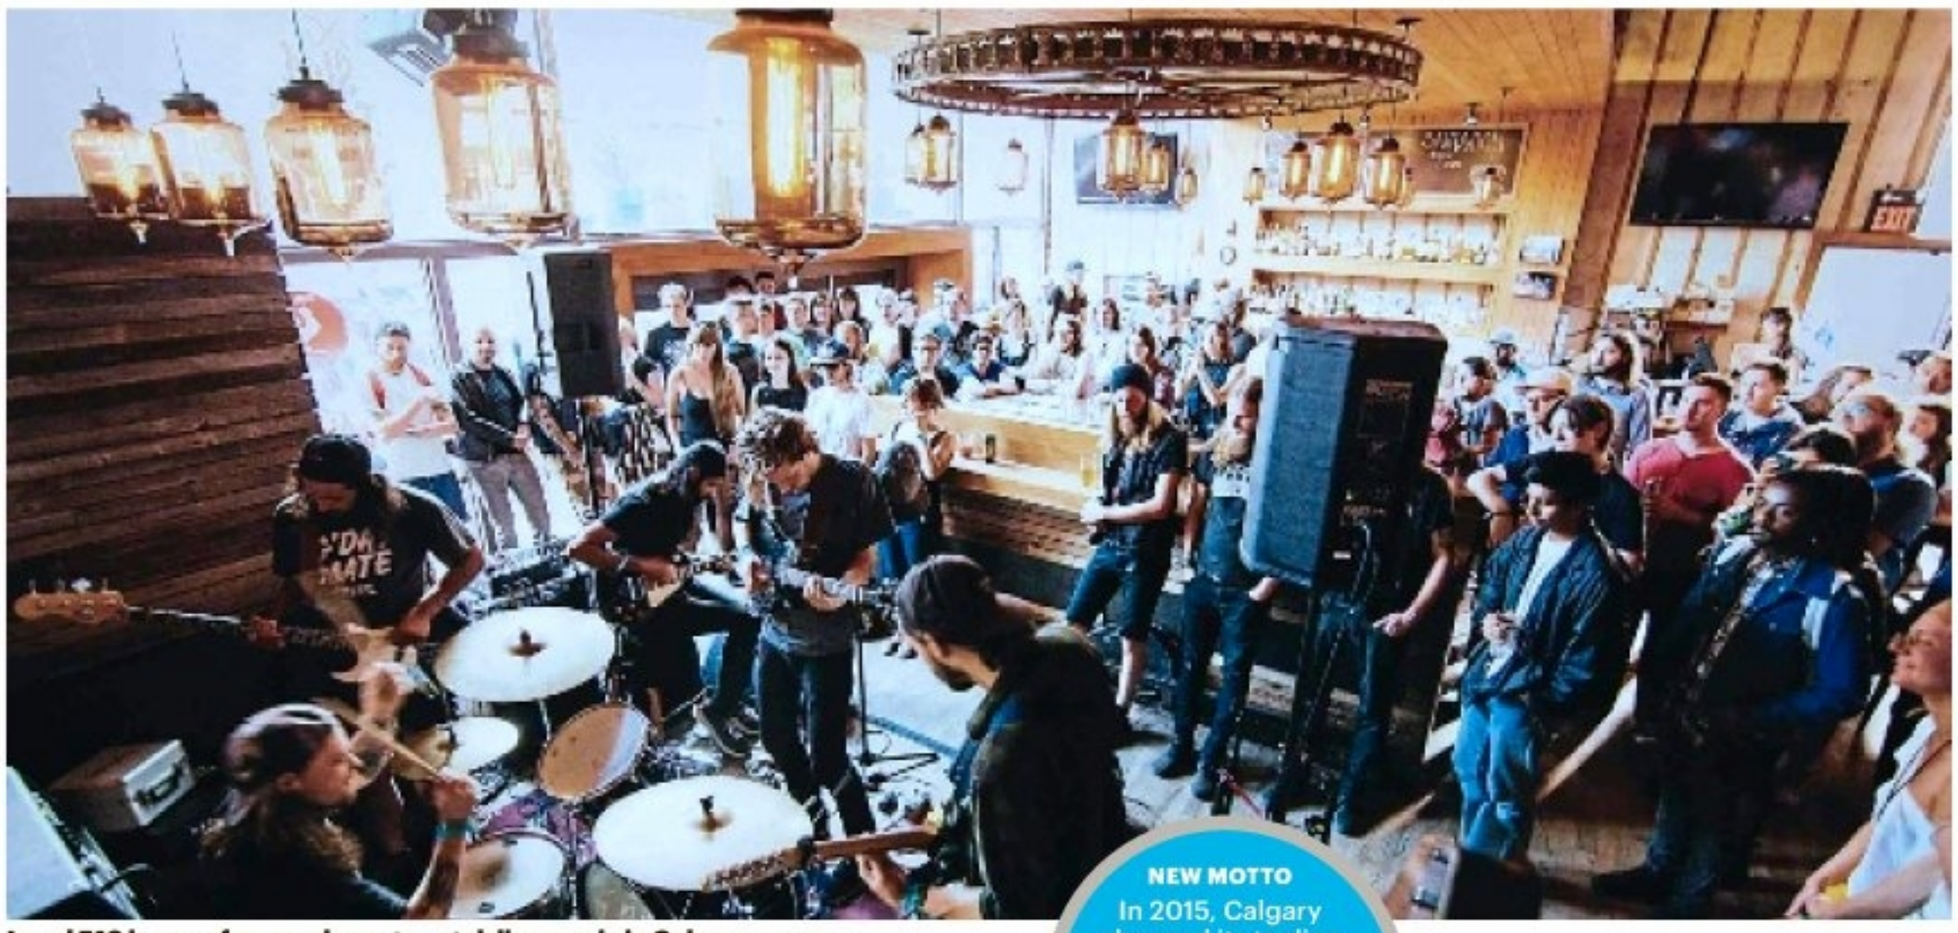
Calgary, minus the Stampede

ALTERNATIVES

Cowboy town increasingly known for its tunes, brews

Karen Kwan
For Metro Canada



Local 510 is one of many places to catch live music in Calgary. HANDOUT

Take away the Stampede and what've you got in Calgary?

Turns out this city is Canada's sunniest and it's certainly not just about cowboys and the renowned rodeo.

This former heart of the New West, in fact, has much in common with the city of Austin, Texas, while remaining under the radar as a travel destination.

Calgary's music scene

Music lovers, there's some serious toe tappin' in store for you here. With 2016 being Calgary's Year of Music, you can start by exploring the new home of the National Music Centre, Studio Bell.

Themed to feel more like a festival than a museum, this $191 million project features various stages. Everything from the science of music to a celebration of Canadian moments in song complete with iconic items (such as the shades from Corey Hart's Sunglasses at Night) and interactive installations take the spotlight.

For your fill of live music acts, you'll find venues peppered throughout Calgary's urban sprawl, such as Local 510, but now there's also the newly established Music Mile, which stretches through the East Village and Inglewood.

Here you can catch close to two dozen live music events (of a variety of genres) from Thursday to Sunday, including music fests, such as X-Fest, at Fort Calgary, and laid-back jam sessions at mainstays like Ironwood Stage & Grill and The Blues Can.

A boon for brewery buffs

On 17th Avenue at National, there are more than 70 beers on draught, including ones from local entrepreneurs.

Tool Shed Brewing, for example, is the brainchild of two former IT and satellite communication guys whose business started with your basic home-brewing system in one of their backyards.

Also on tap is Last Best Brewing & Distilling, the fourth iteration of the Bearhill Brewing Family of Breweries, which was launched back in 2002 by a then 22-year-old Socrates Korogonas with the $2.5 million he made through winning the grand prize in the BC Cancer Foundation's Lifestyles Lottery.

National also serve brews from the small new kid on the block: The Dandy Brewing Company.

Dandy was started by Matt Gaetz, who has a background in the liquor industry, with three 20-something-year-old friends (Ben Leon, a teacher, Dylan Nosal, a chef, and Derek Waghray, who'd just completed a chemistry degree). They got into the beer game when Alberta changed their liquor laws at the end of 2013, which eliminated the minimum production capacity of 500,000 litres. Their plans to go beyond nano-brewery size are on track: this March, the last of the four guys went full-time with the company.

They recently added an eight-tap tasting room where you can sample their small-batch brews and this year Dandy will likely triple their production compared to 2015 with upwards of 50 different styles.

NEW MOTTO
In 2015, Calgary changed its tagline from 'Heart of the New West' to 'Be Part of the Energy' to reflect its shifting identity.

Karen Kwan was a guest of the Calgary Tourism Board, who did not pay for or review this story.

HÚH! A THUNDERCLAP FOR MYSTICAL ICELAND

Now that Iceland's spellbinding Viking football cheer has been adopted the world over and its Canada-born first lady Eliza Reid is capturing praise for her intelligence and style, there's no better time to visit. Here are some of the country's most astounding experiences.

WORDS AND PHOTOS MELITA KUBURAS/METRO

Feel the White Noise

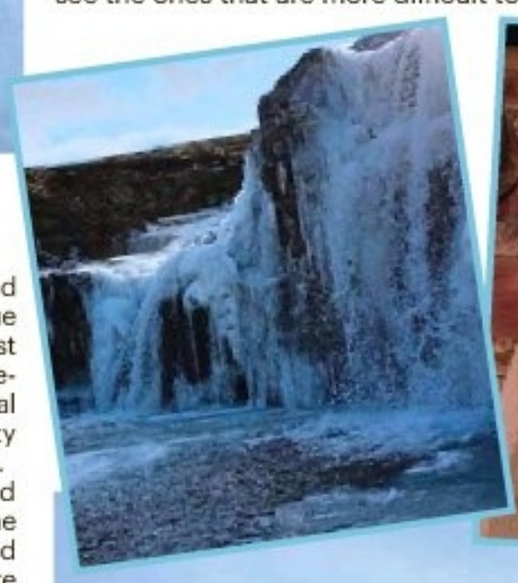
If Reykjavik is where you plan to stay, a day trip to West Iceland and the Snaefellsnes Peninsula will inspire a post-modern feeling right out of Don DeLillo's White Noise: "It's like I'm in a car commercial," you'll find yourself thinking, as the icecap-covered volcano looms above. Renting a car to visit iconic sights closer to the city such as Geysir (seen right) is much more fun than taking bus tours, which can also be costly. Plus, having a car gives adventurers the freedom to go chasing after lesser-known waterfalls — they are everywhere — and take hikes to see the ones that are more difficult to get to.

Hot, hot geo-location

Iceland's tectonic plates and active volcanoes will intrigue even those with little interest in geomorphology. That's because the island's geothermal activity translates into beauty you can see, feel and taste.

Rye bread can be baked overnight by burying it in the ground where geo-heated water cooks it, as seen here at the Laugarvatn Fontana spa.

While the Blue Lagoon is quite touristy, it's worth as a stop on the way to or from Keflavik International Airport to soak stiff muscles and a tired brain. For a cheaper spa day, visit any public swimming pool as most are geothermally heated, and will only cost about $10 for a visit.



Whale steak and moldy cheese

Maybe it's the sea salt, the ocean air, or the careful way that the rich ingredients are assembled, but food is really delicious in Iceland. For a taste of local specialties visit Ostabudin in Reykjavik — if you're not venturesome enough to try their grilled minke whale steak, opt for a charcuterie platter of smoked goose meat, mutton, moldy cheeses and cured horse.

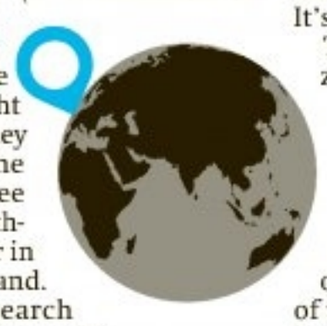
A place called Smakk Barinn offers Icelandic tapas served in a row of four or six little jars. One woman says she ordered all of the seafood items, while her partner got all six of the meat dishes — a smart ordering strategy. Develop your own.

NOT A TOURIST | A letter from Mark Stachiew in Iceland

Journey to the centre

The view from atop Iceland's mighty Langjökull glacier on a sunny day is spectacular, but we've come to see what inside.

People have been coming to the top of the Long Glacier (a translation of its Icelandic name) on snowmobile tours for a long time, but some entrepreneurs thought it would be great if they could tunnel into the ice so people could see the beauty hidden within this massive glacier in the Highlands of Iceland.



After years of research and red tape, the dream became a reality in 2014 when half a kilometre of tunnels were bored into the ice and they started bringing people inside. The year-round attraction has proven so popular that last year they were closed for just 14 days — and that's only because the weather was bad.

The weather must have been apocalyptic because visitors ride to the mountaintop aboard towering, eight-wheeled trucks that were once used as missile carriers by NATO. These motorized beasts normally navigate the snowy route to the top with ease.

After descending from these impressive vehicles, we spend some time admiring the view of the surrounding mountains, then drop into the glacier, an experience something like going into a mineshaft. Everyone puts crampons over their shoes to avoid slipping on the slushy floor. The temperature inside is at the freezing point. It's cool, but not uncomfortable.

The glacier walls are marked with horizontal lines. Like the rings of a tree, these lines show the age of the glacier.

Each line represents a year of ice deposit. Some years there is less ice, some years there is more and some are outlined in black, indicating the presence of volcanic ash. The most recent of these was the massive 2010 eruption of the volcano with the unpronounceable name, Eyjafjallajökull.

With coloured lights to guide the way, the tunnels and rooms carved into the glacier are ethereally beautiful. As we explore, our guide explains the history and science behind the ice sheet and uses it as a teaching moment about global warming.

Langjökull glacier has been sitting astride these mountains for 4,000 years, but our guide explains that it is shrinking and could be gone in less than 150 years if current warming trends continue.

"You're on vacation now so you don't have to think about that. Think about it when you get home," he said.

After walking into the beating heart of a glacier, it's hard not to.

The Langjökull glacier's walls are marked with lines showing ice deposits that are not unlike the rings of a tree. MARK STACHIEW/FOR METRO

Some fear Citgo sign may soon go dark

The Citgo sign that lights up the Boston skyline is seen by baseball fans every time a home run sails over Fenway Park. Now there's fear it may soon be gone. The building on which the sign sits is part of a parcel of Boston U buildings for sale. "For us, the sign makes us think of the Red Sox, but for people outside the city, it means Boston," said Greg Galer of the Boston Preservation Alliance. which is circulating an petition to have the sign declared a landmark, which would offer some protections from change. Run with wolves in Golden

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Area a perfect mix of activity and nature

Don't plan on spending much time sitting around doing nothing in Golden this summer. On land, on water and in the air, there's just too much to do to justify being lazy. Just a pit stop? Golden begs to differ.

One of the resident wolves at the Northern Lights Wolf Centre in Golden, B.C. All the wolves at the centre have been rescued and hand-raised from the time they were pups. GOLDEN B.C. TOURISM

Bond with a bear

Ride the chairlift up Kicking Horse Mountain to visit Boo, a 14-year-old orphaned grizzly who has a 20-hectare refuge there all to himself. Try to be there at feeding time to see him devour heads of lettuce and other produce (grizzlies prefer a diet that's about 80 per cent vegetarian). Or you might see him splashing in one of the streams or ponds that dot the refuge.

Skydive or paddle

Book a tandem skydive with Skydive Extreme Yeti.

Your experienced guide will do all the work — all you have to do is muster up the nerve to jump. Or try a whitewater rafting trip on the aptly named Kicking Horse River with Glacier Raft Company.

You can pick a trip based on your experience and comfort level, ranging from relatively tame Class II rapids to jaw-clenching Class IV rapids.

Climb

Take a high-elevation hike at Kicking Horse Mountain Resort on its "via ferrata" (Italian words meaning "iron path"), a hiking and climbing route that opened in 2015. It offers routes for both novice and experienced climbers that include steps, ladders, suspension bridges and steel cables in steep areas that climbers can clip onto for safety. It's open to climbers ages 12 and up.

Commune with wolves

At the Northern Lights Wolf Centre, about 18 kilometres north of downtown Golden, you can visit the resident wolves Shelley and Casey Black hand-raised from pups after the small zoos or breeding facilities where they were born had to find them new homes.

You can also join some of the wolves — all of which are accustomed to being around people — on a guided photography walk in the wilderness.

Find water

Columbia Wetlands Adventures, 26 kilometres south of Golden, offers lots of options for getting out on the water.

Rent a canoe, kayak, stand-up paddleboard or pedal boat and head out on the calm surface of the Columbia River. Or take a tour of the wetlands on an inflatable boat with a guide who will point out nesting birds and wildlife while you sit back and soak in the scenery.

Cleveland's West Side Market no vestige of last century

Growing up in the 1980s, Sam McNulty often visited the food vendors at the West Side Market, located in Cleveland's Ohio City neighbourhood.

"I kind of fell in love with the neighbourhood back then, even though it was considered sketchy," said McNulty. By the 1990s, when McNulty interned with a community development organization, "the neighbourhood was still largely boarded up — not a place you wanted to be after dark," he recalled. "But you were starting to see little glimmers of hope."

Today Ohio City offers visitors a very different impression. There's a booming craft beer and dining scene with some 40 eateries, many concentrated around West 25th Street. McNulty opened his first restaurant, Bier Markt, at 1948 W. 25th St., over 10 years ago; today he co-owns five restaurants in the area, including two of the brewpubs Ohio City is now known for.

Meanwhile, the West Side Market, more than a century old, isn't just some vestige of a bygone era. It's a vibrant, bustling retail food centre with more than 100 vendors and a million annual visitors. And for anybody who loves historic architecture, Ohio City offers lots of eye candy: quiet residential streets lined with beautifully restored Victorian homes.

The neighbourhood expects to be busier than usual with Cleveland hosting the Republican National Convention July 18-21. McNulty says he fielded requests to book his restaurants solid with GOP events, but decided to book up just one venue each night so the other four would be open to the public.

"We're excited to show off all the good things happening here," he said. "It's going to be a good time."

Nothing celebrates Cleveland's ethnic heritage like the food at the West Side Market. pierogis, Hungarian-style sausage, strudel and more. Locals can shop for groceries, hungry visitors can get ready-to-eat food ranging from tamales to cupcakes, and out-of-towners can pick up gifts like honey, spices, gourmet popcorn and jams. Don't miss the clock tower, 137 feet tall; the 44-foot-high tiled, vaulted Guastavino ceiling, and the head of a longhorn steer overlooking Foster's Meats.

Just shy of history

BRITISH OPEN

Mickelson lips out his chance for first-ever 62 at a major

Phil Mickelson was 16 feet away from a place in history he wouldn't have to share with anyone.

Fans watched from a rooftop balcony. Royal Troon members strained to see out the window from the clubhouse behind the 18th green. Jack Nicklaus usually doesn't watch golf on TV, but he made an exception for this moment.

In 436 majors held over the last 156 years, no one had ever shot 62.

That's still the case. By a fraction of an inch.

"I want to cry," Mickelson said.

Mickelson pointed his putter toward the hole and was ready to step into history Thursday in the British Open when his birdie putt turned sharply to the right at the mouth of the hole, just enough to ride the edge around the back of the cup and sit there, teasing him.

"You made a beautiful read and putt on that last hole but got absolutely stone-cold robbed," Nicklaus said in a message on Facebook.

Phil Mickelson reacts after narrowly missing a birdie putt on the 18th hole in Troon, Scotland, Thursday. MIKE EHRMANN/GETTY IMAGES

Mickelson plopped his hand on his forehead in disbelief. His caddie, Jim (Bones) Mackay, was so stunned that he fell over backward.

"It was one of the best rounds I've ever played ... and yet I want to shed a tear right now," Mickelson said. "That putt on 18 was an opportunity to do something historical. I knew it, and with a foot to go I thought I had done it. I saw that ball rolling right in the centre. I went to go get it. I had that surge of adrenalin that I had just shot 62, and then I had the heartbreak that I didn't."

27

Over the last 43 years in the majors, there had been 27 rounds of 63.

No tears were necessary at Royal Troon, not after a round of 63 that was brilliant even by Lefty's standards, and certainly not after building a three-shot lead over Patrick Reed and Martin Kaymer on an ideal day by the Irish Sea.

Mickelson seized the moment with a birdie on the par-5 16th from a bunker short of the green, and a 4-iron to 15 feet for birdie on the par-3 17th to reach 8-under par. He knew no one had ever shot 62 in a major. He also knew he most likely would never get a chance like this.

"That would have been really something special," he said. "So to have that putt lip out, that's going to sting for a while."

TORONTO HONDA INDY

Hunter-Reay looks to repeat success

Ryan Hunter-Reay's last race was five days ago, but it's already a distant memory for the veteran IndyCar driver.

Hunter-Reay finished last at last weekend's Iowa Corn 300, completing just 105 of 300 laps due to engine issues.

"I've almost burned that one out of my memory," he said Thursday.

The 35-year-old will aim to get back on course at the Honda Indy Toronto this weekend when he races at a track that's been kind to him in the past. Hunter-Reay led for 36 laps at the 2012 Indy Toronto en route to winning the event.

It's something that he would like to do once again Sunday on the streets surrounding Exhibition Place.

"It's great to be back in Toronto," Hunter-Reay said. "This place has some great memories here and it was a big part of our championship run in 2012."

Hunter-Reay has yet to record a victory this year, but does have three top-5 finishes and six top-10 finishes in the Verizon IndyCar Series, which places him 13th in the circuit's overall standings. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Portugal rises in rankings

European champion Portugal has risen two places to No. 6 in the FIFA rankings, and Copa America winner Chile stays fifth.

Argentina is still No. 1 despite losing to Chile in the final. Belgium remains second after losing to Wales in the European Championship quarter-finals. Wales climbed 15 places to 11th. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RECIPE Fried Egg-Pizza

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

If you're looking for ease then eggs are your friend. Pizza is also your ally so this is basically dinner's version of your BFF.

Ready in
Prep time: 5 minutes
Total time: 25 minutes
Serves 2

Ingredients
- 2 pitas
- 1 cup passata (or tomato or pizza sauce)
- Salt and pepper
- 1 1/2 to 2 cups mozzarella, grated
- 1/4 cup crisply fried bacon, crumbled
- Few leaves of basil
- 2 eggs

Directions

1. Preheat the oven to 450 F. Place the pitas on a baking sheet. Pour tomato sauce on pitas and spread it around. Leave a little edge clear of sauce all the way around.

2. Sprinkle your cheese on each pita and push it slightly out the edges so you make a nest for your egg. Sprinkle basil and the bacon all around the edge of your cheese nest. Gently crack an egg in the middle.

3. Slide the cookie sheet carefully into the oven. Bake for about 15 to 20 minutes, depending on how done you like your eggs.

4. Use a spatula to move your egg pizza to a cutting board where you'll cut each pizza into four. Serve with slices of avocado, sour cream and a bit of salsa. Enjoy!

IT'S ALL IN THE STARS Your daily horoscope by Francis Drake

Aries March 21 - April 20
Your home routine will be interrupted today because small appliances might break down, or minor breakages could occur. Be patient with family members to avoid arguments.

Taurus April 21 - May 21
This is an accident-prone day for your sign. No question. Slow down and pay attention to everything you say and do. Be careful! Think before you speak or do anything.

Gemini May 22 - June 21
Something having to do with money, cash flow and your possessions will catch you off-guard today. Check your bank accounts. Count your change, and check your bills.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
Today is subject to sudden interruptions. The behavior of others might upset you. Almost certainly, your daily routine will change, which means you have to stay light on your feet.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
Today you feel restless. It's almost as if you need more air! Give yourself a chance to do something different and gently explore something new.

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Your relations with a friend or a member of a group might upset you today. People are changing horses midstream; plans are going up in smoke. Hang in there!

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
A boss, parent or authority figure might do or say something that shocks you today. Don't quit your day job. Do not overreact. Give yourself time to have a sober second thought.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Travel plans will be cancelled, delayed or rescheduled today. Likewise, schedules with colleges, universities, publishing and the media will change.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Stay on top of your financial arrangements, especially anything to do with banking, inheritances and shared property. Something unexpected will arrive out of the blue.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
It's not easy to relate to others today, because they might just explode for some reason. Today is full of all kinds of disruptions and sudden arguments.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Allow extra time today, because your work routine will be interrupted for sure. Computer crashes, power outages, staff shortages and canceled meetings are just some examples.

Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Parents should be vigilant today, because this is an accident-prone day for their kids. Meanwhile, it's also a rocky day for romance. Just smile and be sweet and understanding.
